Excerpt: . . . CHAPTER IV. HISTORY OF THE MONASTERY. All that need be said of the original establishment at Ely has already been told in the account of the foundress. There is no doubt that in the monastery there were religious persons of both sexes. Dean Stubbs says the mixed community was the fashion of the time 1; and he gives Coldingham, Kildare, and three in Normandy--Chelles, Autun Brie, and Fontevrault --as examples of similar foundations. In this instance the abbess was the head of all; and this accounts for Bedes calling the house a nunnery. What name was given to the superior of the mens part does not appear. Of all the abbesses who ruled over this twin monastery we know only the names of the first four; and all these were in due time canonised. These were S. Etheldreda (673-679), S. Sexburga (679-699), S. Ermenilda (699-), and S. Werburga (dates unknown). If we allow ten years for the duration of the rule of the last two, we still have the names of the abbesses for only thirty-six years out of the one hundred and ninety-seven years that the institution lasted. It is said to have been in a very flourishing condition when the Memorials of Ely, p. 18. Gloucester is another example. Danes came to destroy it: and there is no hint anywhere that there was not a continuous succession of abbesses during the whole period. S. Sexburga, the elder sister of the foundress, succeeded her as...
