RABBITS AND ARCHAEOLOGY

The History Press Ltd. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Rabbits and Archaeology, Tom Williamson, Rabbit farming was an important industry in post-medieval times, and has left many traces in the modern landscape, the real significance of which has not always been recognised - leading to much confusion among archaeologists. The visible traces are 'pillow mounds' and other structures such as boundary banks and walls, vermin traps and tip traps, and warren lodges. These structures were often erected in close...
